

This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

18 The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised,
19 To preach the acceptable year of the Lord. 20 And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him. 21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears. (Luke 4:18-21)

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath,
29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong. 30 But he passing through the midst of them went his way, (Luke 4:28-30)

These words of Jesus struck like a bolt of lightning into the souls of the religious establishment of the day much in the same way that it offends the large institutional churches of our own day. Jesus was revealing Himself as the Messiah which would place all religious leaders at His footstool. This, these greedy and power-hungry, ten-horned saints could not bear. (Excuse the frank speech, but it is the most charitable term I can lay hold on to describe the depth of their abject hypocrisy.) They had enjoyed free rein in setting the standards and making the rules for worship until this very moment. They were, too, well aware of the prophecies of the coming Messiah. Now that the moment had arrived, they were bitter and filled with rage at the thought that He would come on their watch. These had less rage for the openly ungodly Romans who occupied the land than for this One who came preaching the Gospel to the poor, the brokenhearted, and those who were in bondage to sin.

The lection from which our Lord read was the very one appointed to be read that day in the synagogue. It was far more than coincidence that this day's text happened to be the very one that so clearly prophesied of the Coming of the Lord. "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the brokenhearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, To preach the acceptable year of the Lord." Every soul that is separated from God is in bondage of the will to sin. No lost sinner has a free will, for he is in bondage to perform those deeds his father, the devil, directs. Only in Christ can we enjoy a will that is free for our wills are surrendered to that of God. His will becomes our will, and the things we now desire are those which He desires. These were words of immeasurable grace spoken by our Lord. The Love of God, thus spoken, should find a sympathetic echo in the hearts of His people, but these rulers were fountains of hate and wrath.

"And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down. And the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him." It seems mysterious to me that the "eyes of all... were fastened on" Christ following that reading. The power of God's Word must have penetrated the dark hearts to recognize some awful (to them) truth. It was the response of the Lord to this reading that set aflame the raging hearts of those who sought to deny the presence of the Messiah: "This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears." Amazing how 'hearing' is so powerful when it is the Word of God that is being heard. "So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Romans 10:17) But what was the effect of hearing this Gospel on the Jewish leaders? "But to Israel he saith, All day long I have stretched forth my hands unto a disobedient and gainsaying people." (Romans 10:21) These were privileged to first have the truth revealed, but the least accepting of it. "And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath, And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill whereon their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong."

What a great tragedy to have the Messiah revealed to us, reject Him, and then find that He is forever hidden from our view! They would have stoned the Lord of Glory, but He became hidden from their view. Our Lord is a gentleman and will not abide where He is not welcome. Homes that do not welcome the Lord will do without Him. So will nations that reject Him – for He will not remain in the midst of a rebellious and evil generation. "But he passing through the midst of them went his way." "His way" diverged from the way of these sinful rulers in Jewry. He miraculously vanished from their view. They were left behind as the Lord went on His Way – the ONLY Way – the Way, the Truth, and the Life! "For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the LORD." (Isaiah 55:8) These wicked men of the synagogue were left standing alone in the place of stoning, and Christ went His Way. They remain there today in the place of death.
